The perfect fit for micellar waters

- A visible laser beam indicates that micelles have formed.
- Micelles are too small to be seen by the naked eye.
- When a laser beam is directed through a pure solution, it passes straight through; however, in the presence of micelles, the beam is scattered and becomes visible. This principle is based on a well-established laser scattering method used to assess droplet size.
- Feelz PC 325 is capable of forming micelles.
